Ans (2) Plato and aristotle could be argued as the first ~~to~~ critics ~~that~~ in the history of literature or the one who laid the foundation.

Plato was the teacher of aristotle and both of them laid ~~on~~ their views of how text should be read as a critic or how to decipher the meaning respectively in The poetic & The republic

Plato had a negative view on ~~art~~ and literature. he laid this idea through the concept of ~~mimesis~~ mimesis (imitation) he further clarified this idea of mimesis by three levels The ideal – This he considered was the purest, ideal, like god & godden, Second he considered ~~the~~ earth the things we see mountains, desert, rivers are all reflection ~~oth~~ of this ideal world and ~~the~~ third he placed ~~The art & literature~~ The poets – the imitate and reflect the earth in their work, which is already a copy, so it was basically twice away from truth, a copy of a copy.

Aristotle on the other hand other views, unlike plato who had a negative image of ~~mimesis~~ mimesis and art / poetry aristotle ~~art~~ viewed this in a positive manner, he argued that mimesis reflects human nature and universal truths, he said that mimesis is not just imitation of other things but an intellectual and creative process, The poet first reflects on the subject then carefully laid down the views with a structure and creativity he also argued that through mimesis human learns.

further Aristotle argued that mimesis in a play like tragedy play where the audience could see the decision that a tragic hero takes and they could see what are the consequences that follow by that decisions he said that these kind of mimesis in a play could build moral and spiritual sense in an individual.

Both Aristotle and plato shared their views on art and literature, plato on the other hand also argued that art and literature can evoke feelings, but he also argued that such feelings could mislead the people easily, guiding them in the wrong direction.

Plato also argued that poets should be banned in a just society because how they write poetry, art, litriature could influence the general people, he further said that only those poets should be allowed whose work morally educates people, and further there should be a moderation to look on the work that is being created. In simple a system that keeps a watch on the literature being produced so that it could be regulated to stop the corrupting ideas to spread in the society.

Both plato and aristotle had opposite views on art they both could be are from the classical criticism whose main idea was focused on the concept of mimesis. The didactic (moral) purpose was to educate the audience, normative (rule) based approach in which fixed rules were laid down, if the play was written in accordance with these rules, further if a play did follow these rules it was considered as a good play.

They further categories plays such as Tragedy, Comic & epic play, Aristotle & plato being the critics of this time had different views on the topic of art, literature in society.

Ans (6) A room's one's own is written by famous female writer and widely known Virginia woolf., ~~that literically~~ ~~argument against the~~

A room's one's own is basically a feminist text that questioned and laid some ideas, ~~as it the~~ as a voice of women and could be said as a text written by her as a voice raised against patriarchy.

In these text there are various ideas laid down which are as follows:

* A room's One's Own argues that for woman to write and raise she must have ~~a no~~ economic independence. not being dependent on any one, and a room of her own which means Creative independence. or mental independence where she could express herself without any restrictions ~~of~~ the patriarchy.

* She also raised a question as of why there are very few women's writing present, was it because women ~~lacked talent~~ ~~?~~ ~~the~~ ~~was~~ lacked talent?

* She further argued that literary history has been dominated by the male., which could also answer as of why there were very few writings of women; most of them were removed or suppressed by the male literary history.

* She also argued that with being economically independent not only the women could raise in society but also be good mothers, wives and individuals, and a responsible citizen

* She also gave an example of how women's fate have been controlled and suppressed by the patriarchy by showing in the imaginary ~~sister of the famous~~ literary writer Shakespeare.

* Judith Shakespeare's fate - even though, being equally ~~educated, and~~ talented and witty possessing every aspect of Shakespeare she is denied of education, Even if she were equally educated, ignored, suppressed by society, mocked by society. this was the fate of many real women. ~~which tired their~~

* She also said that literary legends works were famous ~~by~~ because they wrote work from both male and feminine.

mind (Condrygonous).

* She also called for a seperate base from men, when women could write, appreciate each others works, separate from male interference. so that more women are capable to raise their voice.

Virginia woolf's a room's one's own could be cited as the most influencial feminist text before her text it was Mary wollstonecrafts - A vindiction of rights of women that too raised the suppressed voice of women.

Virginia woolf text can be ~~rels~~ said as important because not only she demanded women ~~to~~ be ~~lter~~ treated equally but it also influenced the later literary work.

Writers like George eliot could be given as an example of women keeping a man's name to keep her place in literary world because her real name would've given away her female identity and her voice would've been suppressed.

Virginia woolf inspired many new generation ~~to~~ female writers, with her text A room of one's own.

Ans (3) William wordsworth and Samuel taylor Coleridge both belonged to romantic criticism, both of them laid down few key ideas which laid the foundational ideas for romantic criticism, wordsworth in lyrical ballads and ~~word~~ Coleridge in biographia literaria.

Romantic criticism had laid some common key ~~ideas~~ ~~are~~ as follows:

* The emphasis on nature, imagination, emotion
* ~~They rejected the ok~~
* The Romantic's criticism came as a revolt / reaction against the neo-classical.

* They rejected the decorum and the rigid language of neo classical.

* They had a simpler language, ~~the~~ focused on rustic life, Poets like John dryden & alexander pope wrote the poetry which could not be understood by everyone and served only the elites, the romantics opposed them and preferred to write on ordinary human life / people too.

The history of romantics were also influenced by french revolution which brought new ideas, the industrial revolution which ~~speed~~ speedup the progress of society, machinery replaced everything. City became dirty and ~~pot~~ polluted. and they were the first one's to raise ~~question~~ concern on environment, and further that how romantics turned to nature.

Emotions are integral as these and imagination are the driving force of a romantic that ~~drive~~ keep them writing more work.

View of Coleridge and ~~Samuel taylor~~ Wordsworth in their works respectively Biographia and lyrical ballads.

~~Litra~~ Biographia Literaria: written by Samuel taylor coleridge some view in which he differed from lyrical ballads. The main ~~of view~~ point was that of the language, in lyrical ballad wordsworth wrote that the role of poetry and was (aesthetic pleasure and moral learning) he further said that the language should be simple that everyone can understand.

Coleridge argued that the language should not be that was spoken everyday and pointed that, it should be refined and elevated for artistic purpose, Coleridge ~~pointed~~ ~~po~~ also spoke of "suspension of willingness". In supernatural poetry the audience is ready to accept the unnatural and accept disbelief.

Coleridge ~~also~~ also wrote defence of Shakespeare. In which he said that it was a defence that neo classics argued Shakespeare of violating rule of time and place. So Coleridge defended Shakespeare in this. and further said that Shakespeare's play were successful because he was able to intergate many artistic ways into a play rather than follow fixed rules and imnitate older writers style

The view on emotion in poetry is important because through emotions the romantics were able to imagine and reintigrate ideas that one could not be able to think of, as the concept of imagination of fancy too helped further them drive their emotions

~~Coleridge in his one poem presented a view that once he was able to feel ever.~~

Ans (7) (ii) Elaine schowalter

Elaine schowalter was a feminist critic famously known for her ~~work~~ women work into the wilderness.

In ~~this~~ This was basically a feminist text that had key idea of ~~x~~ feminist critique and Gynocriticism.

Feminine Critique.

* She famously quoted that women are not born female but made into one by society.

* Society teaches what it means for one to be a women.

* She also like earlier female writers demanded for womens upliftment, ~~and~~

* She argued ~~to~~ for women to have a independent base where she can express herself.

* she also coined the term gynocriticism.

* She also argued women can also raise in society if given more opportunities.

2) Gynocriticism

* This term was coined by elaine ~~sch~~ showalter. basically she argued that female have a ~~sp~~ seperate base in which females works are critique by female standard not male.

* She also said that womens works that were lost ~~dur~~ in the male literary history should be rediscovered and appreciated.

This was basically the key idea ~~that~~ elaine Schowalter brough in her feminine text, She also like her ~~ear~~ previous writer, Mary wollstone Craft, virginia woolf, simon de beavoir kept her voice ~~in~~ and further upliftment ~~of~~ of women.

7 (ii) Natyashastra

Natyashastra was a treatise it was famously known for the bharatmuni's contribution widely known as Rasa theory. below we will discuss the Rasa theory written by bharatamuni ~~further developed~~ by abhinavagupta in the treatise Natyashastra.

In the Indian aesthetics, the rasa theory is widely known rasa means "essence", in a play, and, to rasa was used to elevate and bring out emotions that the audience could collectively enjoy known as "rasa anubhava". ~~Experience of rasa~~

Rasa was believed to bring out various kind of emotions, originally there we eight as, Vira(hero), bidhbuta (wonder), Hasya (comic), Bhibhista (ugly), karuna (sorrow), (krodha) anger, bhayanaka fear, Raudra (valor) Rasa dominate any of these in a play.

later a nineth one Shanta (peace) was added. later abhinavagupta argued that the sensitive audience does not watch the play with personal emotions, but with a detached one. that keep their personal feelings ~~sepa~~ separate.

This was the famous rasa theory it was later further developed by various other Indian critics who contributed their ideas and led their insights it was written in the ~~tre~~ Sanskrit treatise Natyashastra

(14) T.S. Eliot was a famous, writer, poet, critic, he famously belonged to the New Criticism

The key ideas of New Critics were:

* The saw the work deprived of external factors, such as authors biography known as active fallacy

* The also ignored the intentional fallacy the mistake of judging a work with readers personal emotions, as each reader varies their personal emotions would mislead in during criticism.

* They further said that the text ~~could~~ should emphasize on close reading.

* Practical criticism, in which the work was ~~as~~ analysed without any context to history, biography and the meaning of the text was further, derived from the text itself, it was analysed carefully, by language, metaphor, image and tried to understand to see what the text had to say.

T.S. Eliot as a Critic laid some key ideas such as

* T.S Eliot argued that when a text or poetry is written it should be read as a separate, self contained text, and the readers emotions should not be seen in the work.

* He further said that a text should be in order, language and in discipline he criticized the chaotic style of few romantics, he said that work should be written as they makes sense.

* He further coined ~~that~~ "Object Correlative" he said that a poem should not say the things directly (the important emotional peak moment) rather it should be shown through images, and other things rather than being said directly.

* He also said that a work should not ~~contained~~ contain the writers personal feelings and should be written from a point of distance means the work should not reflect authors personality it should stay away from it.

* As being a part of new criticism T.S eliot also further added his own contributions in respect to how a poet should keep in mind while, writing a play.

* He too argued a play should be read as a self contained text, when a poet or writers write their work, they should be considered as a ~~sepe~~ separate work, individually separate from the creator.

The limits of New Critic

* It was not suitable for all kinds of text

* As it eliminated the history and context entirely, there were some that required to be read with the same.

* Further in they were also eliminative of readers response which other times proved to be important as post-colonial argued. and gave them importance.

* In some authors intent was important as their works were entirely misunderstood. that what they originally write for
